To whom it may concern,

My PeopleSoft application development team has worked with Corey Kaye over the last few years on two very successful development projects for the University of Calgary.

One was a custom PeopleSoft Inventory application which was designed in conjunction with IT, the Facility Management IT team and Supply Chain Management. This custom application was deployed to enable Facilities Management to track live inventory and provide reporting and forecasting capabilities. Additional automated business processes were introduced into this system providing Archibus with the transactional and monetary accounting required by Facilities Management area to run their business.

The second project was to develop integration between the PeopleSoft ERP Finance/SCM system and the Archibus system. Integration points were built to provide data feeds of voucher, journal, receiving and inventory transactional information relevant to the Facilities Management department. This automated transmission into the Archibus Operations & Maintenance module was responsible for nearly all of the financial reporting capabilities within the Archibus application. The success of these extractions were used to fulfill additional capital project requirements during an expansion of Archibus' capabilities in the later half of phase 1 of the upgrade / implementation project.

Corey's contribution to both of these projects was huge. He was able to contribute that rare combination of complex business understanding with in-depth technical knowledge in order to deliver a successful product. Corey has strong interpersonal skills and is very organized. He took a lead role in helping to foster a trusted and professional relationship between the three UofC business units.

Based on the success of these two projects I am giving Corey a glowing reference. I would not hesitate to work directly with him again in the future. Past experience has highlighted for me the fact that a strong technical resource coupled with excellent communication skills is a huge asset to any project or organization.

Yours truly,
